OVERVIEW

Gifted students not only think differently; they feel differently. This combination shapes the gifted child’s daily experiences, perceptions of the world, social and emotional wellbeing, personal development and academic achievement. This seminar will help parents develop an understanding of the gifted child’s intellectual and personality characteristics as well as the social and emotional factors that impact upon a gifted child’s development. Parents who understand these factors are best able to emotionally support and nurture their child’s natural abilities, helping them to flourish emotionally and thrive academically.
